Book Description

The Hikam, or Wisdom, of the great Sufi Master Ibn `Ata 'Allah al-Iskandari has long been acknowledged as an essential and classic masterwork of the Islamic science of enlightenment. Ibn `Ata 'Allah exemplified the ultimate model of a Sufi master possessed of a deep foundation in the sciences of the Qur'an, the way of the Prophet and the Universal Laws of the Islamic way of life, both outer and inner.

Short but immensely thought provoking, dense in their significance and insightfulness, crisp and sharp in their elucidation, the aphoristic Hikam are a true manifesto for those who are sincerely on the path of knowledge and awareness. This wisdom strips away our conventional responses to events, actions and phenomena, and encourage us to concentrate on the only true Reality.

With the publication of Shaykh Fadhlalla Haeri's new translation and with the aid of his accompanying commentary, students and adepts alike can now gain a profounder understanding of these timeless teachings from the wellspring of the heart of Islam.

About the Translator and Commentator

Acknowledged as a master of self-knowledge and a spiritual philosopher, Shaykh Fadhlalla Haeri's role as a teacher grew naturally out of his own quest for self-fulfillment.

He travelled extensively on a spiritual quest which led to his eventual rediscovery of the pure and original Islamic heritage of his birth, and the discovery of the truth that reconciles the past with the present, the East with the West, the worldly with the spiritual – a link between the ancient wisdom teachings and our present time.

A descendant of five generations of well-known and revered spiritual leaders, Shaykh Fadhlalla Haeri has taught students throughout the world for over 30 years. A prolific author of more than thirty books relating to the universal principles of Islam, the Qur'an, and its core purpose of enlightenment, he is a gifted exponent of how the self relates to the soul, humankind's link with the Divine, and how consciousness can be groomed to reflect our higher nature.

The unifying scope of his perspective emphasizes practical, actionable knowledge that leads to self-transformation, and provides a natural bridge between seemingly different Eastern and Western approaches to spirituality, as well as offering a common ground of higher knowledge for various religions, sects and secular outlooks.

Editor's Note

Ibn `Ata 'Allah al-Iskandari was born in the middle of the 7th century AH/13th century CE and grew up in Alexandria during the Mamluk era. Although not much is known about his life, he had the best teachers in all branches of traditional sciences and became known as a great master of Islamic law of the Maliki school. His lifetime witnessed the great flourishing of several Sufi brotherhoods, including the Shadhiliyya, the Mawlawiyya, the Chishtiyya and the Ahmadiyya. His father was a student of Imam al-Shadhili, though it is unlikely he himself ever met him. Initially Ibn `Ata 'Allah was not so drawn to the Sufi path, preferring to concentrate his energies on jurisprudence. Yet, in spite of his early antipathies, he did become a disciple of Shaykh Abu 'l-`Abbas al-Mursi, (d. 686/1288). As his most important and principal work, the Hikam, attests, he had become a Sufi master in his own right, and was already a shaykh when al-Mursi died. He became the third great master of the Shadhiliyya order which grew from Morocco and spread throughout North Africa and beyond. With his career as a scholar in Cairo under the Mamluks in full flourish, he died at around 60 years of age in 709 AH/1309 CE and was buried there in the Qarafa cemetery.

Preface

I first came across the Hikam of Ibn `Ata 'Allah in an indirect manner. The first time was in the last 1980's. I was browsing in the City Lights bookstore, San Francisco's fading memorial to the Beat Generation, when I came across the "Letters" of Ibn `Abbad of Ronda. These "Letters" were in fact one of the first commentaries on the Hikam, but I couldn't relate them to the Hikam at that point. Ibn `Abbad only alluded to Ibn `Ata 'Allah and he assumed a familiarity with the Hikam on the part of the reader. My second encounter with the Hikam was when one of the accomplished people of the Way, Shaykh Hossam Raouf, gave me a copy of the commentary on the Hikam by the great Moroccan Sufi, Ahmed Ibn `Ajiba. This is a marvelous work. It is much more than a simple commentary and contains extraordinary insights for the wayfarer. It can even be read on its own as a classical masterwork of Islamic Sufi literature without any reference to the Hikam. To a large extent the Hikam had become a prompt for the outpourings of Ibn `Ajiba. It was only when Shaykh Fadhlalla Haeri began his own teachings on the Hikam, which I first experienced through the gatherings organized by Swedish adepts in the early 1990's, that I realized the signal importance of the Hikam to any person hoping to enhance his ability, as the Noble Prophet said, to "see things as they really are."

And therein lies the true significance of the Hikam. By stripping away our conventional responses to events, actions and phenomena, and encouraging us to concentrate on the only true Reality that is in, behind, and ahead of all manifestations, the Hikam are a true manifesto for those who are sincerely on the pathway to knowledge and awareness. The Hikam are short but immensely thought-provoking. They are all Shari`a-centered but are clearly the expressions of a person in true tawhid. They are dense in their significance and insightfulness, but are crisp and sharp in their elucidation. Wayfarers and ordinary persons of taqwa can only benefit from reflecting on them. Is it any wonder that there have been numerous commentaries on them, often from people of the highest station of realization?

I believe that I have read most of the commentaries on the Hikam in the Arabic language, and the various translations available in English. The translation and commentary of the Hikam by Shaykh Fadhlalla are in a class of their own for they combine three essential qualities that, collectively, distinguish them from others. Firstly, they are the work of a realized master of the Way, who has experienced and acknowledged the ever-present Hand of Allah in all. Secondly, Shaykh Fadhlalla understands the defining parameters of the modern era and mind, and can therefore address himself directly, in a language that is intelligible and relevant, to the concerns of contemporary men and women. Thirdly, he is an accomplished linguist in Arabic and English, and has rendered the translation in a meaningful and appropriate manner.

There are translations without commentaries; there are useful modern commentaries, but not in English; and there are classic commentaries, which are accessible to only a few with the specialist knowledge and language who could benefit. Shaykh Fadhlalla, by providing us with a modern, faithful translation and a penetrating insightfulness into the meanings of Hikam, has given the English speaking reader and adept the best possible introduction to this masterpiece that uncovers Islam's inner dimension.

Introduction

Shaykh Abu Al-Fadhl Ahmed Ibn Muhammad Ibn `Abdul Karim, known as Ibn `Ata 'Allah al- Iskandari, is one of the great enlightened Sufi Masters of North Africa who influenced many generations after him along this path. Ibn `Ata 'Allah was an acknowledged `Alim and Imam of Shari`ah and the most influential man of light and gnosis of his day. He came under the transformative light of Abu Al-`Abbas al-Mursi, who had passed on to him the richest treasures of Shadhili teachings including much of the tradition of the founder of this Tariqa, Abu al-Hassan al-Shadhili.

The great Ibn `Ata ' Allah left this world the year 709 Hijra and is buried in the old cemetery in Cairo, where there is adjacent to his tomb a large and popular mosque in our present day.

Ibn `Ata 'Allah exemplifies the ultimate model of a Sufi Master with a deep foundation of Qur'an, the way of the Prophet and the Universal Laws of the Deen both outer and inner. His spiritual legacy is encapsulated in the dense form of the Hikam, which is renowned as one of the most important Sufi texts, and certainly the earliest of Shadhili texts. Besides his illumined sayings of the Hikam, his books 'Lata'if-al-Munan, at-Tanwir fi isqat at-Tadbir', 'Allah The Unique Name', 'Taj al-Arus' and 'Miftah al-falah wa Misbah al-Arwah', are well known and available to Sufi seekers of today. Most of these works are additions or embellishments or complementary to the Hikam.

I was given a copy of these illumined wise sayings in 1977 with comments upon them made by a great Moroccan Shaykh Ibn `Ajiba. This work had been my companion at all times and I have been blessed with the opportunity to translate and make brief comments upon this treasure over several years. Although there are numerous great and valuable commentaries on the Hikam in Arabic, there is none in English that makes them accessible for the serious seeker. Taking a cue from Shaykh Ahmed az-Zarruq, who produced at least seventeen complete commentaries, and possibly thirty in total (I have in my possession his seventeenth commentary), I have myself only produced seven different drafts and consider the present work as complete for now.

The Hikam represent a fully integrated composition along the highway of the eternal adoration of the One Creator. This symphony for the heart's revival contains many notes to do with the conduct, courtesies and purification of the inner as well as prescriptions on how to be established in the appropriate states and stations, whilst being transformed by the Divine Essence. There are many subtle treasures and hints for the enlightened beings as well as the serious wayfarer.

I have attempted to make the commentaries brief and suitable for deeper reflection and additional elaboration.

I pray to Allah that we can benefit and be further nourished from the rich banqueting table of the great Masters and carriers of the Muhammadi Torch. If we seek the Original Light, then we will be surrounded by spiritual lanterns and candles. It is Allah who guides unto Him those who are worthy of eternal joy of His Ever-presence.

The Hikam or Wisdom of Ibn `Ata 'Allah

Section 1: Hikam 1-16

Hikam 1

One of the signs of dependence on one's own actions is the lack of hope when mistakes occur.

If we assume that the Source of Power behind our actions is from ourselves, we will be disappointed when the results do not match our expectations. But when we are in true submission to the One, we will see the unity of the origin and motive behind our acts, our personal role in carrying them out, and their outcome. Faults will then be seen only as signs for us to heighten our awareness of Divine Will, Mercy and Generosity. For enlightened beings there is total unity in all actions and outcomes.

Your desire for divestment, even though Allah has established you with means, is an aspect of hidden desire. And your desire to have means, while Allah has established you in [the state of] divestment, is a comedown from lofty aspiration.

If you are given obvious or steady means to earn your keep, it is discourteous to desire that your provision come to you through uncertain or unknown means. On the other hand, when one is in a situation where the means of provision are not known, the courtesy to the One is not to seek secure and constant means. Dependence on Allah requires acceptance of His Will, ways of provision and help. The wise seeker connects the outcomes and means with the Source of Power and creations.

Competing endeavors will not breach the ramparts of destinies.

No matter how much energy you put into an intention or goal, it will not be realized if it is not in accordance with Allah's Decree. You cannot superimpose your will on His, for He governs both the seen and unseen worlds and our destiny. What is expected of a serious seeker is to focus intentions, attention and endeavors on the Unique One Essence behind all manifestations and occurrences.

Hikam 4

Let your self be at rest from self-concern. Do not undertake to do what someone else has carried out on your behalf.

Allah, the Creator and Sustainer, reveals that He is the One who satisfies needs, and establishes the ways and means of provisions. Thus the duty of the mu'min is to follow Divine Will with ease and confidence, and to be concerned with proper worship, heightened awareness and knowledge of His Will. Be Allah's guest and guard the courtesies worthy of the Lord.

Hikam 5

Your striving for what is guaranteed for you, and being remiss in what is demanded of you, are signs of blindness in your insight.

What the Creator has intended for us is to strive for enlightenment and readiness for the Hereafter. Emotional battles and material insecurity are only dark shadows that sidetrack and distract us from the path of success. Our basic provisions and evolvment are guaranteed and where our efforts and passion are needed is to dive into the ocean of Divine Unicity and follow our hearts' true insight.

Hikam 6

Do not despair when, in spite of intense supplication, there is a delay in receiving the expected gift. He has guaranteed that He will respond in what He chooses for you, and not what you choose for yourself, and at the time He chooses, not the time you desire.

Allah responds to the yearning Du`as and calls from a sincere heart. Calls for help are caused by His decree that we return to Him, thus the time and way of His response is in His loving hands. What is expected of creation is that it calls upon, depends on and trusts in the perfect ways of the Creator, for He always knows our true state and the appropriate remedy and provisions for the journey unto Him.

Do not doubt the promise, even if what was promised and its timing had been determined, lest that [doubt] cloud your insight and extinguish the light of your innermost.

To maintain proper access to inner illumination we need to dispel all doubts regarding Divine Perfection, Justice, and the Wisdom behind the unfolding of events in their proper sequence and time. What matters most is our full submission and total trust in His Will and Purpose, even though we may have had a true inspiration and insight into an opening or event which does not take place.

Hikam 8

If He opens a door for you, thereby making Himself known to you, do not worry if your deeds do not measure up [to this]. For truly, He did not open the door for you, save that He desired to make Himself known to you. Do you not know that the knowledge of Himself is what He presents to you, whereas you presented Him with actions? What a difference between that which you present to Him and that which He brings to you!

We cannot measure Allah's total Generosity, or compare it with our (illusions) of sacrifices or pious actions. Whatever we present to the Creator is insignificant in comparison to what He has already endowed us with, based on the Fitrah and the Light of the Ruh (Spirit). For indeed, He is the Creator and Container of all that is within and around us, seen and unseen! Our needs and actions are only signs and preludes to the openings, which were already present, but from which we were veiled.

Actions differ because the states and receptivity [of hearts] differ.

An action which emanates from a free and pure heart is not the same as that motivated by personal desires, fears and ambitions. Results of actions vary according to one's intentions and inner condition of one's heart. Actions are outer expressions of what is in the heart and reflect its state. Thus all existential conditions and experiences reflect the true state of the heart.

Hikam 10

Actions are [mere] constructed forms, but what endows them with their spirit is the presence of true sincerity in them.

Actions are the physical manifestations of our intentions and desires. Our outer experiences reflect our inner reality and state. Our actions fail when they are not in accordance with our intention, and are thus confused. The ultimate sincerity is the knowledge that we do not possess any ‘independent’ power or will. Depend on Him, read His Decree and expect the best of illumined outcomes.

Hikam 11

Bury your existence (your reputation or ambition) in the earth of obscurity, for whatever sprouts forth without being buried first will not complete its fruition.

Unless our actions are based on humble dedication and service in the way of Allah, they will not bear the fruit and freedom from falsehood and “otherness”. When one is desirous of reputation or acknowledgment, then the fruits of such action are soured or ruined, because of the nature of the ever-changing world. The successful seeker is not concerned with what appears as final fruits of actions, for he experiences the benefits from the start of dedicated submission to Him.

Hikam 12

Nothing benefits the heart more than a spiritual seclusion, whereby it enters the domain of true reflections.

For spiritual health we need to turn away from desires and struggles, confusions and shirk. The heart needs to experience its stillness and be replenished by contemplation and increased awareness of the One. We need to balance outer experience with inner space and light until such time as we see all manifestations and experiences emanating from the One Divine Essence.

How can the heart be illumined while the images of creations are imprinted in its mirror? Or how can it depart to Allah while shackled by its passions? Or how can it desire to enter the Presence of Allah while it has not yet purified itself of the impurity of its distractions? Or how can it expect to comprehend the subtle mysteries while it has not yet repented from its faults?

The heart is like a mirror which reflects what it faces and desires. This mirror moves towards attracting what is desirable and repulsing what is to be avoided. When a sincere heart faces the Divine Light, it reflects profound truth and when it faces the world of change and discord, it reflects the relevant disturbance and transient realities. The heart cannot be illumined by spiritual insight if it is veiled and tarnished by attachments, passions and desires. It must be exclusively dedicated to its original purpose, which is the path of absolute Tawhid. Allah is the only True Lord.

Cosmos is all darkness which is illumined only by the manifestation of the Truth in it. Thus whoever sees creation without witnessing Him in it, or at it, or before it, or after it, is in need of Light, and is veiled from the suns of gnosis by the clouds of worldly manifestations.

Although all the worlds have been created from His Light, yet all manifestations appear as light and shadow, good and bad, day and night. If the seeker does not see the One Pervading Light behind all these flickering images, he is engulfed by the confusion of the existential shadow-play and the clouds of changing realities. Adamic creation has its meanings and purpose rooted in Original Light, which is the Ever-present Cause behind the apparent changes of worldly experiences.

What points to the existence of His Omnipotence, may He be glorified, is that He has veiled you from Himself by that which has no existence alongside of him [yourself].

Anything other than Allah is a passing illusion and a veil of flickering images. Everything in the universe has emanated from Him, is sustained by Him and returns to Him. The sensory worlds are, however, a temporary mercy and the starting point from which to transcend. In truth there is none other than Him and everything else is a reflection or a creation which indicates His Unique Effulgence. It is said that he who recognizes that creations have no independent power to act has won, and whoever sees them as void of independent life has achieved, and whoever sees them as non-existent has arrived.

How can it be imagined that something veils Him and it is He Who made everything manifest? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since it is He Who manifests through everything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since it is He Who is Manifest in everything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since it is He Who is Manifest to everything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since He was the Evident before the existence of everything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him when He is more evident than everything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since He is the One alongside of Whom there is nothing? How can it be imagined that something veils Him, when He is closer to you than anything? How can it be imagined that something veils Him since, without Him, there would have been no existence for anything? What a marvel it is that existence appears in non-existence, and how the contingent has been established alongside of Him Who possesses the attribute of timelessness.

The Truth has not come from some 'thing', nor is it in, or above, or below some 'thing'. If it had come from something it would have been created and thus have been limited in its life-span. If it were above something, it would be resting on something, and if it were in something it would have been contained, and if it were under something it would have been under its power. Whatever appears in the world of witnessing is an effulgence from the Eternal Divine Essence and is perceived in accordance with the state and sensitivity of the perceiver. Thus no created entity has an independent lasting reality and so in truth it is non-existent compared to its timeless Creator. When you compare the relative to the Absolute, the former vanishes and the latter remains as it has been forever.

Section 2: Hikam 17–31

Hikam 17

He has not abandoned any part of ignorance who wants to bring forth [something] in any time other than which Allah has made manifest [at that time].

The enlightened being simply accepts and confirms things as they are, and acknowledges them as they appear and manifest, with knowledge and contentment. It is the veils of ignorance, fantasy and illusion that make a person perceive other than reality as mirrored in his destiny. That is why it is said that the truth is only reflected through a pure heart in submission to Allah's Decrees.

Hikam 18

Your postponement of duties until the time when you have [free] time is one of the follies of the self.

The nature of the lower self is to seek expansion, ease and pleasure. Postponement of dedicated and selfless actions is one of the tricks of the self to perpetuate its ever-increasing demands and dominance. The excuse is lack of time or energy. It is the wise one who acts against the self, past mental habits, and acts purposefully towards the higher goal during times of ease and leisure, as well as during constrictions and difficulties. It is said that time is like a sword; if you do not cut it, you will be cut by it.

Do not demand change of your state to a different one; for had He so wished you for something else, He would have done so, without extracting you from your present state.

The enlightened being sees the perfection within every state and situation that Allah has put him in. In good health, he is in gratitude and joy. If he is sick, he realizes Allah's Mercy and the benefits in patience and rest. Contentment with destiny is the foundation of courtesy towards Allah and thus a door to illumination and insights. All of this assures that the state and experience is within the boundaries of the proper path, for otherwise one must urgently repent and take the first exit from unacceptable disobedience.

Whenever the yearning seeker attempts to stop at what has been revealed to him, then he is called along by the voices of Truth: ‘What you seek is still before you’. And hardly do the external aspects of created beings display their charms than the voices of their inner realities call out, “We are only a trial, so do not deny [the Truth]!” [2:102]

The serious seeker may be distracted by insights and openings. Allah’s call is for total and utter dedication to His Absolute Light and not to any secondary reflections. If you dedicatedly and relentlessly seek the Truth, then you will be lead to full unveiling. Otherwise you are caught in constant creational conflicts and afflictions due to subtle shirk and other veils.

Your demand of Him is accusing Him [of not fulfilling His promise]. Your seeking Him is due to your absence from Him. Your seeking someone else is due to immodesty towards Him. Your looking for someone else is because of your distance from Him.

He who is preoccupied with Allah's remembrance and concern about His ways is on the path of arrival. Courtesy is to have a contented heart illumined with His Presence, and discourtesy is to have a list of demands from Him, spiritual or worldly. We all are in need to perceive His Mercy, Closeness and loving Lordship. Allah allows us to be in need so as to draw closer to Him, rely exclusively and confidently upon Him and His Perfect Decrees.

Not a breath do you exhale unless it is according to a decree which will come forth.

All existence is subject to Allah's Laws and Decrees and thus all creations experience their destiny accordingly. It is said there are as many ways to Him as the breaths of human beings. The urgency of passing breaths leads us to transformative awareness, submission, contentment and knowledge of His Perfection and Oneness.

Hikam 23

Do not expect to be free from distractions [of otherness], for that will cut you off from attentiveness to Him in the state in which He has placed you.

The sincere seeker will always accept and acknowledge the state he is in whilst reflecting upon the meaning and perfection of the moment. Worldly occupations and distractions are false justification for lack of constancy of awareness and worship of Allah. Do not wait for ease and time to perform your spiritual duties in this life. Do not be like the sick one, who says I can only take the remedy when I am well and able. The devoted seeker will only reach true tranquility and inner certainty when he acknowledges the time and state he is in with contentment and total faith.

As long as you are in this world, do not be surprised at the occurrence of sorrows. For indeed, they would not appear unless they belong to this world's character and nature.

All experiences and events in this world are in constant flux and change and oscillate between two opposite qualities. Thus there is no worldly state of reliable comfort and ease. It is said that whoever is seeking what is not created (i.e. a reliable world) will exhaust himself in deprivation.

No quest which you seek by your Lord is ever withheld [from you], nor will any quest be easy if you rely upon yourself.

If you sincerely and truly rely on Allah's Generosity, Guidance and Perfection, persist in steadfastness and confidence in His Mercy; then the answer will be most satisfying. All personal endeavors will lead to disappointment and failure unless they are part of progress towards knowledge of Allah and His Will.

Hikam 26

Amongst the signs of success at the end is referring to Allah at the beginning.

Since He is the First, the Last and All-encompassing at all times, it is imperative that the seeker starts all endeavors by reference to His Decrees and acceptance. Humble devotion and constant awareness of His Grace will bring steady progress from beginning to end.

Hikam 27

He whose beginning is illumined, his end will also be illumined.

The reverse is equally true and perhaps more noticed by most human beings. When actions are motivated by basic desires and selfishness, the end will be disgrace and fruitlessness. A life's journey which starts with clear conviction and sincere yearning for Truth, and continues on this path, will most likely end with success and illumination. That which begins with light will end with light and delight, while that which is born in darkness belongs to the darkness of ignorance.

Hikam 28

Whatever is harbored in the hidden innermost will [inevitably] appear in the outer world.

Every vessel will ooze what is within it and the carrier of musk will be traced and discovered. For the insightful, appearance will reveal what is concealed and masks will ultimately wear off. Our reading of the outer world is an interpretation of the inner condition. The outer and inner worlds are connected by the unifying powers of the One Creator and Sustainer of all the worlds.

Hikam 29

What a difference between the one who is guided by Him from the one who seeks proof of Him. The one who is guided by Him knows the Truth as it is and has confirmed the affair by reference to its Origin. And seeking proof of Allah is due to not having reached Him. Otherwise, when was He absent so that one would have to seek proof of Him, and when was He far so that existential needs enable one to reach Him?

The majority of us always look for guidance, indications and proof of the Creator, so as to establish appropriate actions and responsibilities. Then there are those who are enlightened and act upon their inner inspiration and Divine guidance. The first group seeks evidence of light, the few awakened ones live by it. The latter experience life by referring to and understanding Allah's Perfect Ways.

Hikam 30

“Let him who has abundance spend out of his abundance!” relates to those who have arrived. “And whoever has his means of sustenance constricted, let him spend out of what Allah has given him,” [65:7] relates to those who are voyaging towards Him.

The enlightened ones have been given boundless wealth of knowledge in their state of Tawhid. They know that all emanates from Allah and all returns to Him, and in truth He is in control. As for the majority of seekers who are still afflicted with a certain measure of kufr and shirk, they too must serve and sacrifice towards others, who are less fortunate in Iman. The more we exercise generosity and giving, the more we shall experience the presence of the All-Generous, the Ever-Giving, the One Giver. In truth, we are all takers.

Those who are voyaging to Him are guided by the lights of orientation, and those who have arrived will have the lights of meeting. The former belong to their lights, while the lights belong to the latter, because they belong to Allah and to nothing else beside Him. “Say Allah! and then leave them immersed in their vain talk.” [6:92]

The wayfarer’s journey is illumined according to the quality of his intentions, appropriate actions and illumined worship. The enlightened ones are in unison with Allah’s Will and thus do not experience any discord or confusion. The light seeks them, rather than them looking for it. They witness the Beloved constantly – in times of ease as well as during constriction. Their inner state is beyond that of gain and loss. They truly belong to Him and know that all emanates from Him.

Section 3: Hikam 32–37

Hikam 32

Looking out for the faults hidden within you is better than looking out for the invisible realities veiled from you.

It is the intelligent seeker who watches for and deals with his faults, shortcomings and veils, gross and subtle. The obvious faults of the self relate to desires, attachments, expectations and all imbalances in body and mind. The heart's sickness is due to inner desires for acknowledgement, hate, greed, lack of sincerity and other veils which deprive the heart of freedom from otherness. The Unseen is veiled from us precisely because of our faults, veils and cracks of our minds and hearts.

Hikam 33

The Truth is not veiled from you. Rather, it is you who are veiled from witnessing Him, for were anything to veil Him, then that which veiled Him would cover Him. Surely if there were a covering of Him, there would be a limitation to His Being. And anything which limits another has overcome it, “and it is He Who overcomes His creation” [6:18].

Allah is the Creator of all things including veils and limits. His Light illumines every known and unknown entity in existence. He is before, after and within everything, and in Truth - “There is nothing in existence beside Him”. However, we are veiled from seeing His Essence because of the imaginal faculty and veils in us. Yet all veils are part of His Mercy, because without veils or illusions the self will simply die and vanish when faced with the Absolute Truth.

Draw away from the attributes of your human nature, from every trait that opposes your slavehood, so that you can respond to the call of Truth and be close to His Presence.

Much of the self's natural dispositions go against our spiritual potential. Arrogance, meanness, selfishness, impatience, distractions and indeed all disobediences are negative tendencies, which must be left behind if we are to progress. Likewise, modesty, wisdom and justice are great virtues, which relate to appropriate submission and honored slavehood. When the self is properly groomed and subdued, then the lights of higher realities and truth become evident.

Hikam 35

The root of every disobedience, distraction and desire lies in being satisfied with the self. The root of every obedience, vigilance and virtue lies in dissatisfaction with the self. It is far better for you to keep company with an ignorant person who is dissatisfied with himself, than to keep company with a learned man who is satisfied with himself. For what knowledge is there in a self- satisfied scholar? And what ignorance is there in an unlearned man, dissatisfied with himself?

The self perpetually veils knowledge of the present and its perfection. Past experiences and desires along with the biography of so-called failures and successes are the barriers to higher understanding. Thus, whoever does not transcend the barriers of past memories will not read the present situation clearly. Everything will be seen and judged by past values. Thus those who dismiss the self, its past and present, can see the present event with depth and truth.

The rays of insight makes you witness His nearness to you. The eye of insight makes you witness your non-existence because of His Existence. The truth of insight makes you witness His Existence, neither your non- existence, nor your existence.

Insights lead to higher realities and truth, whereas outer sights relate to images, forms, causal relationships and realities. Higher and subtler than the ever-changing world of cause and effect are the Divine Qualities and Attributes and Names which are His only, and thus the seeker's awareness of his own existence vanishes. The ultimate, highest insight leads us to being immersed in the blazing light of Absolute Truth with nothing beside it. In this state one cannot talk of human consciousness or lack of it.

Allah was, and there was nothing beside Him, and He is now as He was.

Allah is the Unique, Absolute Truth and the Essence of all creations, known and unknown. He is totally Independent of all existential creations and realities, and yet everything in existence is dependent upon Him, connected to Him and acts according to His Decrees. He was the Unique, Independent, Absolute and Self-reliant and continues to be the same. Allah is the Creator of time and space and is thus the First, and the Last. He is both Evident and Unseen.

Section 4: Hikam 38–42

Hikam 38

Let not the intention of your aspiration pass to other-than-Him, for one's hopes cannot bypass the [One] Generous.

Whoever reaches the shores of Tawhid will restrict all attention and concern to the One Ocean. Once you bathe in the Source, spring the secondary streams and rivulets will be of no interest. He is the Self-Sufficient and Origin of all gifts, generosities; nothing can ever surpass or overtake Him.

Hikam 39

Do not appeal to other-than-Him to remove a need, which He Himself has brought upon you. For how can anyone else remove what He has imposed? And how can he who is unable to free himself of a need free anyone else of one?

It is only by Allah's Decrees that we experience constriction and relief. Needs at all levels, physical, material, emotional or spiritual are all coded messages from the One Source requiring attention, awareness and hence calling upon Him for relief. It is human misconception and veils that make us assume that other beings can remove harm or bring about desirable outcomes.

Hikam 40

If you have not improved your opinion of Him because of His (great) qualities, then improve it because of the way He deals with you. For has He accustomed you to anything other than good? And has He given you other than His favors?

The sincere seeker is content at heart due to high expectation of Him. Reflect upon His generosity in the past so as to increase your faith in His continuous and unconditional grace, in this world as well as the Hereafter.

Hikam 41

How very astonishing is he who flees from the inescapable and searches for what does not remain with him! “For surely it is not the eyes that go blind, but the hearts which are in the breasts that are blinded.” [22:46]

Whatever we achieve, experience, desire or possess in this world is transitory and will pass. People of discernment and spiritual drive look for that which is constant and Ever-present, Allah, the Inescapable. It is only due to blindness of the heart that we are distracted and confused.

Hikam 42

Do not depart from one sphere [state or experience] to another, otherwise you will be like a donkey at the mill turning round and round. The place he travels to is the same as he travelled from. Thus travel, rather, from creations to the Creator: “And that the final end is to thy Lord” [53:42]. Consider the words: “Therefore he whose departure is for Allah and His Messenger, then his departure is for Allah and His Messenger. And he whose departure is for worldly achievement or marriage with a woman, then his departure is for that to which he flees”. So understand his words, peace be upon him, and reflect upon this if you understand.

Who you are and what you experience relates to your intentions, actions, companions and your overall potential and seriousness. If one’s real intention and desire is for the knowledge of Truth, then the journey will remove veils and barriers until the arrival at source and origin. Allah’s Mercy always reflects the extent of our clarity and resolve in our intentions and actions. It is utter misguidance to seek sustained joy in this world of turmoil and change.
